WELCOME

Dear participant,

The first European edition of the International Summit on the Teaching Profession will take place in the Netherlands on 13-14 March 2013. After two successful editions in the United States this time the Netherlands is hosting the summit. For two whole days, the 'G20' of education, represented by ministers of education, more than 150 teachers, policy makers and trade union leaders will discuss what it takes to provide world-class education. At the conference, developments in daily practice (provided in part by teachers themselves) will be combined with the latest insights garnered from scientific research. The aim is to share experiences and to learn from one another.

This summit will focus on the quality of teachers. In several sessions, using examples from practice, some 500 participants will enter into discussions with one another. The programme will offer more room for teachers than in the previous two years. Six 'teacher intermezzos' have been scheduled that focus on teachers. What are lessons really about? The programme compiled by the teachers consists of sketches, international discussions and a film on their daily practice.

The Summit will thrive by open and direct interaction between all participants; those with heart for education, who are willing to share their extensive experiences, to motivate one another and to inspire.

We look forward to the 2013 International Summit on the Teaching Profession!
