THE U.S. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION’S EXPENDITURES FOR CONFERENCES WITH EXPENSES IN EXCESS OF $100,000 IN FISCAL YEAR 2012
(Implementation of the Office of Management and Budget’s Memorandum 12-12)

INTRODUCTION
This report summarizes the actions that the U.S. Department of Education (Department, ED) took to implement the conference-related provisions of Memorandum 12-12, “Promoting Efficient Spending to Support Agency Operations,” which the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) issued on May 11, 2012. The report describes the Department’s efforts to reduce conference spending and the processes and controls the Department has in place to ensure that conferences are reviewed and approved at the appropriate level. Our goal is to continuously evaluate and improve our work and processes to ensure that we remain responsible stewards of public funds. We welcome the opportunity to share this information and receive suggestions on additional ways to reduce conference spending without compromising our obligation to carry out the Department’s mission. Comments and questions regarding this report can be sent to conferenceexpenses@ed.gov.

OVERVIEW
The Department sponsored 28 conferences with expenses in excess of $100,000 during fiscal year (FY) 2012. The total cost to the Department for these 28 conferences was just over $10 million ($10,029,980), which represents 0.015 percent of the Department’s $68.1 billion in discretionary appropriations (including discretionary Pell Grant funding). The average cost of these conferences was $358,214; with a median cost of $284,433.

These conferences had a number of purposes and supported the Department’s work in three content areas: elementary and secondary education, college and careers, and research and evaluation (see Figure 1). The purpose of the majority of these conferences was to update non-federal staff on key education issues, for example, updating state and local education staff who are responsible for collecting and reporting education data to the Department about changes in Department procedures for submitting data; providing information on changes in federal policies and procedures to student financial aid professionals who provide financial assistance for students in postsecondary and higher education; and training teachers, administrators, and others on effective approaches to improve literacy skills. Just less than a third of these conferences provided training to non-federal project managers who received competitive grants from the Department. This training focused on effective grants management, including required reporting on annual progress, implementing rigorous project evaluations, and adhering to federal cost principles. Such training was frequently combined with training from experts on topics aimed at supporting grantees to effectively and efficiently meet their project goals and maximize the impact of their projects. The purpose of two conferences was to

1 The Department’s elementary and secondary programs annually serve nearly 16,000 school districts and approximately 49 million students attending more than 98,000 public schools and 28,000 private schools. Department programs also provide grant, loan, and work-study assistance to more than 15 million postsecondary students.
conduct awards or recognition ceremonies for outstanding schools, teachers, and students that the Department is authorized by statute or executive order to hold. The purpose of another two conferences was to gather input from experts on ED’s investments and initiatives. Detailed information about each of these conferences is provided in the Appendix.

EFFORTS TO REDUCE CONFERENCE SPENDING

Both before and after the issuance of OMB Memorandum 12-12, the Department took a number of steps to reduce spending for all conferences, including conferences with expenses that are less than $100,000. These actions are outlined below.

Communication with ED Staff

- Issued Department Directive on food, meeting, and travel expenses. On October 27, 2011, the Department issued a directive on the “Use of Appropriated Funds for Subsistence, Attendance at Meetings, and Invitational Travel.” The directive establishes the Department’s policies regarding the use of appropriated funds for meals, refreshments, and expenses of attendance at meetings for both government and non-government employees, as well as the policies and procedures for review, and when applicable, authorization and approval of official government travel by non-federal employees, often referred to as “invitational travel.”

- Issued Department Directive on using Department facilities for conferences. On March 20, 2012, the Department issued a directive on “Scheduling and Use of Headquarters Auditoriums for ED-Sponsored Conferences and Meetings.” The directive requires offices to use the Department’s two auditoriums for Department-sponsored conferences occurring in Washington, DC with an expected attendance of 250 or less, unless a waiver is obtained from the Department’s Office of Management.

- Held meetings with senior Department officials. Shortly after OMB Memorandum 12-12 was issued, senior officials met on May 30, 2012 to review the memorandum and discuss the steps the Department would take to implement the memorandum. Senior staff were regularly updated on the conference review process and the actions they should take to reduce conference spending.

- Provided training for ED staff. Comprehensive training sessions on prudent conference planning were held for employees involved in planning and implementing conferences. Contracting officers, program managers, program attorneys, and budget analysts attended these training sessions. The training sessions were held for each office to encourage questions and discussion, as well as to elicit feedback on how to effectively streamline the conference review process.

Communication with Grantees

- Issued memo on conference spending to all grantees. A new “Memorandum to ED Grantees Regarding the Use of Grant Funds for Conferences and Meetings” was developed and is included in all new and continuation grant awards (beginning June 26, 2012). The memo reminds grantees of the cost principles for federal grants and encourages them to consider, among other things, whether there are more effective or efficient alternatives to a face-to-face meeting (e.g., webinars, video conferencing) that can achieve the desired results at a lower cost.
• Met with grantees. Senior staff spoke at meetings of the Department’s grantees to review ED’s policies regarding the use of grant funds for conferences and to answer questions about the practical application of federal cost principles to grantee conferences.

Communication with Contractors

• Clarified contract language on food and travel expenses. The Department modified its contract language to require contractors to receive written consent from the applicable contracting officer prior to incurring any costs for food or travel.

• Revised contract language clarifying allowable conference expenses and prior approval of hotel contracts. The Department added language to all new contracts clarifying allowable contractor compensation costs (e.g., no room upgrades for Department or contract staff, no dual compensation from the Department and another source) and requiring that a subject-matter expert on the Department’s Event Services team review all hotel/venue contracts prior to the final agreement between the hotel and the contractor.

• Conducted a meeting and webinar for Department contractors. The Department held a meeting and webinar for contractors who are currently providing contract support for Department conferences to ensure that they understood the Department’s policies regarding allowable conference expenses. Department staff reviewed the new contract language regarding food and travel expenses and ED’s process for approving hotel/venue contracts (see above).

PROCESS TO REVIEW CONFERENCES

The Department has established a consistent and thorough process to review and, if appropriate, approve conferences. Following the release of OMB Memorandum 12-12, Department officials closely reviewed this process and identified areas where it could be supplemented with additional checks and balances for conferences with expenses in excess of $100,000 (see description below).

The Assistant Secretary (or equivalent) of each office in the Department determines whether a conference is necessary and the most cost effective means to meet the Department’s objectives. If there is a decision to hold the conference, the Executive Officer of the office sponsoring the conference reviews and, if appropriate, approves conferences with expenses less than $25,000. Conferences with expenses greater than $25,000 must be reviewed and approved by a contracting officer in the Contracts and Acquisitions Management office. These approving officials review costs to determine, among other things, if they comply with Department policies regarding the use of appropriated funds for food and travel, and to ensure that the costs support a fair and reasonable price. In order to determine whether prices are fair and reasonable, one or more comparisons of the prices proposed by offerors is compared with historical prices, published market prices, the Government Cost Estimate, and analysis of any other relevant information in an offeror’s proposal. If there are questions regarding the appropriation(s) supporting the expense, advice is sought from the Office of the General Counsel. Finally, for Department-sponsored conferences occurring in Washington, DC with an expected attendance of 250 or less, the conference must be held in Department facilities unless a waiver is obtained from the Department’s Office of Management. For larger conferences in Washington, DC, offices are encouraged to consider other government-owned or government-provided facilities before considering non-governmental options.

Conferences with expenses greater than $100,000. For conferences with expenses that are expected to be more than $100,000, the Department established a second level of review that builds on the review described above. This second level of review is conducted by a cross-Department review team that provides recommendations to the Deputy Secretary for his review and, if appropriate, approval of these conferences. The review team includes staff from Contracts and Acquisitions Management to ensure that costs are reasonable and necessary; Event Services to ensure that costs related to hotels/venues are reasonable; the Office of the General Counsel to ensure that the justifications for the expenses are legally sufficient and are allowable based on statutory and regulatory requirements; and the Office of the Deputy Secretary to ensure that policy issues are raised and addressed. This second-level review considers additional information submitted by the office sponsoring the conference, which includes, among other things, a statement of how the conference will advance the Department’s mission and an assurance from the Assistant Secretary (or equivalent) that the conference is necessary, that alternatives to a face-to-face meeting (e.g., webinars, teleconferences) were considered, and that steps were taken to reduce or minimize costs.

The Deputy Secretary considers the recommendations of the review team and may request additional information or suggest changes to the conference to reduce costs before deciding to approve or disapprove the conference. The Deputy Secretary also reviews conferences with expenses that are expected to be more than $400,000 to ensure that there is a compelling reason to support spending these funds on a single conference. For conferences that are expected to exceed $500,000, a waiver request is prepared for the Secretary to review and consider, and if appropriate, approve. The waiver request outlines the exceptional circumstances that exist to support that a conference is the most cost-effective option to achieve a compelling purpose.

2 The Department’s policy is to maximize the use of government-owned or government-provided facilities for Department-sponsored conferences and meetings.

3 OMB Memorandum 12-12 states that an agency shall not incur net expenses greater than $500,000 from its own funds on a single conference unless the agency head determines that “exceptional circumstances exist whereby spending in excess of $500,000 on a single conference is the most cost-effective option to achieve a compelling purpose.”
APPENDIX

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION’S EXPENDITURES FOR CONFERENCES IN FY 2012
INFORMATION ON EACH CONFERENCE WITH EXPENSES IN EXCESS OF $100,000

At the time OMB issued Memorandum 12-12, the Department did not have in place a central system to track the requested conference information across the Department. Nevertheless, to provide as much information as is available related to the Department’s conference activities, we asked offices to compile and provide information on conferences with expenses exceeding $100,000 that were held prior to the issuance of the OMB Memorandum.4

We used the definition of “conferences” in OMB’s Memorandum 12-12 to identify the events to include in this report. We excluded on-site peer reviews5 in which expert reviewers meet in person to discuss and make recommendations to the Department on competitive grant applications. We also excluded meetings that are necessary to ensure that the National Assessment of Educational Performance (NAEP) is conducted in a valid and reliable manner.6 Rather than being training or educational events, these activities are necessary to conduct standard Department functions and, in the case of NAEP, are necessary for the Department to meet a statutory obligation it is directly responsible for carrying out. Therefore, we reviewed these events to ensure that costs were reasonable and necessary but are not reporting them here.

Given that the OMB Memorandum 12-12 was issued in the middle of FY 2012, contracts had been awarded and funds obligated for the majority of FY 2012 Department-sponsored conferences. Therefore, there were limitations on the changes that could be made to contracts at this late stage in the procurement process without adverse monetary consequences. Furthermore, as funds were already obligated, we did not seek spending waivers from the Secretary for conferences exceeding $500,000. Nevertheless, we reviewed the conference costs, made contract modifications where possible, and learned important lessons for the process moving forward.

What follows is detailed information on the 28 Department-sponsored conferences with expenses exceeding $100,000 that were held in FY 2012.

4 Because prior to May 2012 the Department had no central system to gather and store information related to conferences exceeding OMB Memorandum 12-12 cost thresholds, offices had to search existing records and gather available information about their conference spending retrospectively, from the beginning of the fiscal year to May 2012. It is possible that despite offices’ best efforts, we may not have captured all responsive conferences held prior to the issuance of OMB Memorandum 12-12.

5 The majority of the Department’s peer review meetings are conducted virtually via teleconference. The on-site peer review meetings that were held in FY 2012 were conducted in accordance with the program office’s determination that an on-site, face-to-face review was necessary due to the complexity of the application and the review process.

6 This includes, for example, meetings that the contractor held to train field workers to administer NAEP, as well as meetings to obtain input from experts on item accuracy, grade-level appropriateness, absence of bias, and other technical requirements.
