

INTERMEDIATE REVIEW COMMITTEE RESPONSIBILITY AND CONFIDENTIALITY

Each Intermediate Review Committee participant is required to read and abide by the Canons of Ethical Responsibility as adopted by the Council. The seven Canons of Ethical Responsibility are:

1. An IRC member shall uphold the integrity of the accreditation process.
2. An IRC member shall avoid impropriety and the appearance of impropriety in all activities.
3. An IRC member shall perform the duties impartially and diligently.
4. An IRC member shall refrain from any business activity inappropriate to accreditation responsibilities.
5. An IRC member shall initiate immediately full and open disclosure of any negotiations for or the actual assumption of ownership or control of an institution with which he/she may be directly or indirectly involved.
6. An IRC member shall preserve the confidentiality of the proposed Council action deliberations and of the institutional information to which he/she is privy.
7. An IRC member shall, in representing ACICS, subscribe to the ACICS policy on Discrimination and Harassment in his or her dealings and interaction with the ACICS staff, other members of the committee, or any person affiliated with an institution in his or her capacity as an IRC member. An IRC member is obligated to report to the ACICS Executive Director any action that he or she perceives to be discrimination or harassment. (The ACICS Policy on Discrimination and Harassment is disclosed on the following page.)

In adopting the Canons of Ethical Responsibility, the Council has put into words the expectations of those individuals selected to support the Council in its activities.

The Council encourages individuals to assist institutions in improving and upgrading themselves but requires that when significant assistance is provided to an institution, this individual will disclose this fact and refrain from taking part in any file review or proposed action concerning this institution.

During the IRC file review and presentation sessions, a number of topics of discussion will arise and numerous actions will be proposed to the Council. These discussions are open between the IRC participants and staff. However, an IRC member may not disclose these discussions and proposed actions to the membership. Proposed school actions must be kept confidential. The IRC members have a duty and a responsibility to serve all institutions fairly and equally. Staff assigns institutions under review to the Intermediate Review Committee, and in doing so, distributes them in such a way as to avoid conflicts of interest (i.e., an IRC member will not be assigned an institution for which they have any affiliation or past affiliation in the past five years, for which they are in direct competition, or an institution where s/he served as a member of the on-site evaluation team). If an IRC member has an interest in an institution or feels that there would be any conflict of interest in his or her review of an institution's file, the IRC member should immediately request, upon review of the assignment sheet, that the institution's file be given to someone else and may wish to refrain from participation in the deliberations concerning the proposed action on the institution's status. As a practice, when the IRC discusses an institution in which an IRC member has an interest, this individual may be asked to recuse her/himself from the room. Staff will advise when this may be necessary.

IRC members are expected not to inform institutions of the proposed actions following the review session. These actions are proposals to the Council; only the Council has the right to determine the final action on an institution. Institutions will be notified by certified mail of the Council's final action. The institution will receive this official notification within 30 days following the Council meeting. It is expected that should a member institution contact a member of the Intermediate Review Committee, the IRC member will advise callers to contact the ACICS office for appropriate information following receipt of the action in writing.

institution for which they have any affiliation or past affiliation in the past five years, for which they are in direct competition, or an institution where s/he served as a member of the on-site evaluation team). If an IRC member has an interest in an institution or feels that there would be any conflict of interest in his or her review of an institution's file, the IRC member should immediately request, upon review of the assignment sheet, that the institution's file be given to someone else and may wish to refrain from participation in the deliberations concerning the proposed action on the institution's status. As a practice, when the IRC discusses an institution in which an IRC member has an interest, this individual may be asked to recuse her/himself from the room. Staff will advise when this may be necessary.

IRC members are expected not to inform institutions of the proposed actions following the review session. These actions are proposals to the Council; only the Council has the right to determine the final action on an institution. Institutions will be notified by certified mail of the Council's final action. The institution will receive this official notification within 30 days following the Council meeting. It is expected that should a member institution contact a member of the Intermediate Review Committee, the IRC member will advise callers to contact the ACICS office for appropriate information following receipt of the action in writing.

institutions under review to the Intermediate Review Committee, and in doing so, distributes them in such a way as to avoid conflicts of interest (i.e., an IRC member will not be assigned an institution for which they have any affiliation or past affiliation in the past five years, for which they are in direct competition, or an institution where s/he served as a member of the on-site evaluation team). If an IRC member has an interest in an institution or feels that there would be any conflict of interest in his or her review of an institution's file, the IRC member should immediately request, upon review of the assignment sheet, that the institution's file be given to someone else and may wish to refrain from participation in the deliberations concerning the proposed action on the institution's status. As a practice, when the IRC discusses an institution in which an IRC member has an interest, this individual may be asked to recuse her/himself from the room. Staff will advise when this may be necessary.

IRC members are expected not to inform institutions of the proposed actions following the review session. These actions are proposals to the Council; only the Council has the right to determine the final action on an institution. Institutions will be notified by certified mail of the Council's final action. The institution will receive this official notification within 30 days following the Council meeting. It is expected that should a member institution contact a member of the Intermediate Review Committee, the IRC member will advise callers to contact the ACICS office for appropriate information following receipt of the action in writing.

institutions under review to the Intermediate Review Committee, and in doing so, distributes them in such a way as to avoid conflicts of interest (i.e., an IRC member will not be assigned an institution for which they have any affiliation or past affiliation in the past five years, for which they are in direct competition, or an institution where s/he served as a member of the on-site evaluation team). If an IRC member has an interest in an institution or feels that there would be any conflict of interest in his or her review of an institution's file, the IRC member should immediately request, upon review of the assignment sheet, that the institution's file be given to someone else and may wish to refrain from participation in the deliberations concerning the proposed action on the institution's status. As a practice, when the IRC discusses an institution in which an IRC member has an interest, this individual may be asked to recuse her/himself from the room. Staff will advise when this may be necessary.

IRC members are expected not to inform institutions of the proposed actions following the review session. These actions are proposals to the Council; only the Council has the right to determine the final action on an institution. Institutions will be notified by certified mail of the Council's final action. The institution will receive this official notification within 30 days following the Council meeting. It is expected that should a member institution contact a member of the Intermediate Review Committee, the IRC member will advise callers to contact the ACICS office for appropriate information following receipt of the action in writing.

During the IRC file review and presentation sessions, a number of topics of discussion will arise and numerous actions will be proposed to the Council. These discussions are open between the IRC participants and staff. However, an IRC member may not disclose these discussions and proposed actions to the membership. Proposed school actions must be kept confidential. The IRC members have a duty and a responsibility to serve all institutions fairly and equally. Staff assigns institutions under review to the Intermediate Review Committee, and in doing so, distributes them in such a way as to avoid conflicts of interest (i.e., an IRC member will not be assigned an institution for which they have any affiliation or past affiliation in the past five years, for which they are in direct competition, or an institution where s/he served as a member of the on-site evaluation team). ## Accrediting Council for Independent Colleges and Schools

Dear ACICS Volunteers:

Your ongoing support of, and participation in, the ACICS Accreditation Review process is critical to the agency's ongoing pursuit of excellence in quality assurance. You are included in this communication because you are still listed as an "active" evaluator, according to our records. If you no longer wish to be, please email us at evaluatormanager@acics.org with a request to be made inactive.

The demand for particular areas of expertise at various times is influenced by the programs offered by the institutions undergoing review. Consequently, you may be active (and willing) but have never served on a team.

As a follow up to its 2016 Evaluator Training Initiative, ACICS has commenced its Evaluator Enhancement and Professional Development Program for the 2019 review year. That is, all evaluators in every role that they are qualified to serve in, must complete additional training in the following areas:

- General Evaluator Refresher Training (all)
- Chair Training
- Student Relations
- Educational Activities
- Distance Education

At a minimum, everyone must complete the General Refresher Training before serving on a team. Chairs, given their leadership role, must complete the Chair Training.

Below are the links to the Simulated Webinars that are ready for completion. The links for the additional training webinars will be sent to that specific group once ready.

General Evaluator Refresher:

<https://attendee.gotowebinar.com/register/1501085555884230657>

Educational Activities:

<https://attendee.gotowebinar.com/register/1584781480502370305>

The entire webinar must be viewed in order to receive the Certificate of Completion, which will be considered your completion of the training and count as professional development.

Your attention and cooperation are appreciated. If you have any questions/comments, please email us at evaluatoremanager@acics.org as we work together to continue our strive for excellence.
