To whom it may concern

How would any of you feel if a bill you thought was taken care of all of a sudden became due and payable after twenty, twenty five or thirty years past. And your social security is taken each month for that old loan. It would hurt you, it would [REDACTED] you off and it would make you want to do anything you can to get Ed off your back short of committing harry carry.

I can understand why ED needs to collect student loans, but going back twenty, twenty five or thirty years is a bit much.

Consumer protection needs to be re-enstated for student loans and the change must be retroactive so we can possibly get our money back or some of it at least.
