Table 2-2 Accomplishments in Reading

Kindergarten Accomplishments

- Knows the parts of a book and their functions.
- Begins to track print when listening to a familiar text being read or when rereading own writing.
- Reads familiar text energetically, i.e., not necessarily verbatim from the print alone.
- Recognizes and can name all uppercase and lowercase letters.
- Understands that the sequence of letters in a written word represents the sequence of sounds (phonemes) in a spoken word (alphabetic principle).
- Learns many, though not all, one-to-one letter sound correspondences.
- Recognizes some words by sight, including a few very common ones (a, the, I, my, you, is, are).
- Uses new vocabulary and grammatical constructions in own speech.
- Makes appropriate switches from oral to written language situations.
- Notices when simple sentences fail to make sense.
- Connects information and events in texts to life and life to text experiences.
- Retells, reenacts, or dramatizes stories or parts of stories.
- Listens attentively to books teacher reads to class.
- Can name some book titles and authors.
- Demonstrates familiarity with a number of types or genres of text (e.g., storybooks, expository texts, poems, newspapers, and everyday print such as signs, notices, labels).
- Correctly answers questions about stories read aloud.
- Makes predictions based on illustrations or portions of stories.
- Demonstrates understanding that spoken words consist of a sequences of phonemes.
- Given spoken sets like “dan, dan, den” can identify the first two as being the same and the third as different.
• Given spoken sets like “dak, pat, zen” can identify the first two as sharing a same sound.
• Given spoken segments can merge them into a meaningful target word.
• Given a spoken word can produce another word that rhymes with it.
• Independently writes many uppercase and lowercase letters.
• Uses phonemic awareness and letter knowledge to spell independently (invented or creative spelling).
• Writes (unconventionally) to express own meaning.
• Builds a repertoire of some conventionally spelled words.
• Shows awareness of distinction between "kid writing" and conventional orthography.
• Writes own name (first and last) and the first names of some friends or classmates.
• Can write most letters and some words when they are dictated.
First-Grade Accomplishments

- Makes a transition from emergent to "real" reading.
- Reads aloud with accuracy and comprehends any text that is appropriately designed for the first half of grade 1.
- Accurately decodes orthographically regular, one-syllable words and nonsense words (e.g., sit, zot), using print-sound mappings to sound out unknown words.
- Uses letter-sound correspondence knowledge to sound out unknown words when reading text.
- Recognizes common, irregularly spelled words by sight (have, said, where, two).
- Has a reading vocabulary of 300 to 500 words, sight words, and easily sounded out words.
- Monitors own reading and self-corrects when an incorrectly identified word does not fit with cues provided by the letters in the word or the context surrounding the word.
- Reads and comprehends both fiction and nonfiction materials that are appropriately designed for grade level.
- Shows evidence of expanding language repertoire, including increasing appropriate use of standard, more formal language registers.
- Creates own written texts for others to read.
- Notices when difficulties are encountered in understanding text.
- Reads and understands simple written instructions.
- Predicts and justifies what will happen next in stories.
- Discusses prior knowledge of topics in expository texts.
- Discusses how, why, and what-if questions in sharing nonfiction texts.
- Describes new information gained from texts in own words.
- Distinguishes whether simple sentences are incomplete or fail to make sense; notices when simple texts fail to make sense.
- Can answer simple written comprehension questions based on material read.
- Can count the number of syllables in a word.
- Can blend or segment the phonemes of most one-syllable words.
- Spells correctly three- and four-letter, short-vowel words.
- Composes fairly readable first drafts using appropriate parts of the writing process (some attention to planning, drafting, rereading for meaning, and some self-correction).
- Uses invented spelling/phonics-based knowledge to spell independently, when necessary.
- Shows spelling consciousness or sensitivity to conventional spelling.
- Uses basic punctuation and capitalization.
- Produces a variety of types of compositions (e.g., stories, descriptions, journal entries), showing appropriate relationships between printed text, illustrations, and other graphics.
- Engages in a variety of literary activities voluntarily (e.g., choosing books and stories to read, writing a note to a friend).

Second-Grade Accomplishments

- Reads and comprehends both fiction and nonfiction materials that are appropriately designed for grade level.
- Accurately decodes orthographically multisyllable words and nonsense words (e.g., capital, Kalamazoo).
- Uses knowledge of print-sound mapping to sound out unknown words.
- Accurately reads many irregularly spelled words and such spelling patterns as diphthongs, special vowel spellings, and common word endings.
- Shows evidence of expanding language repertoire, including increasing use of more formal language registers.
- Reads voluntarily for interest and own purposes.
- Rereads sentences when meaning is not clear.
- Interprets information from diagrams, charts, and graphs.
- Recalls facts and details of texts.
- Reads nonfiction materials for answers to specific questions or for specific purposes.
- Takes part in creative responses to texts such as dramatizations, oral presentations, fantasy play, etc.
- Discusses similarities in characters and events across stories.
- Connects and compares information across nonfiction selections.
- Poses possible answers to how, why, and what-if questions.
- Correctly spells previously studied words and spelling patterns in own writing.
- Represents the complete sound of a word when spelling independently.
- Shows sensitivity to using formal language patterns in place of oral language patterns at appropriate spots in own writing (e.g., oral decontextualizing sentences, conventions for quoted speech, literary language forms, proper verb forms).
- Makes reasonable judgments about what to include in written products.
- Productively discusses ways to clarify and refine writing of own and others.
- With assistance, uses conferences, revisions, and editing processes to clarify and refine own writing to the steps of the expected parts of the writing process.
- Given organizational help, writes informative, well-structured reports.
- Attends to spelling, mechanics, and presentation for final products.
- Produces a variety of types of composition (e.g., stories, reports, correspondence).

Third-Grade Accomplishments

- Reads aloud with fluency and comprehends any text that is appropriately designed for grade level.
- Uses letter-sound correspondence knowledge and structural analysis to decode words.
- Reads and comprehends both fiction and nonfiction materials that are appropriately designed for grade level.
- Reads longer fictional selections and chapter books independently.
- Takes part in creative responses to texts such as dramatizations, oral presentations, fantasy play, etc.
- Can point to or clearly identify specific words or wordings that are causing comprehension difficulties.
- Summarizes major points from fiction and nonfiction texts.
- In interpreting fiction, discusses underlying theme or message.
- Asks how, why, and what-if questions in interpreting nonfiction texts.
- In interpreting nonfiction, distinguishes cause and effect, fact and opinion, main idea and supporting details.
- Uses information and reasoning to examine bases of hypothesis and opinions.
- Infers word meanings from taught roots, prefixes, and suffixes.
- Correctly spells previously studied words and spelling patterns into own writing.
- Begins to incorporate literacy words and language patterns into own writing (e.g., elaborates descriptions, uses figurative wording).
- With some guidance, uses all aspects of the writing process in producing own compositions and reports.
- Combines information from multiple sources in writing reports.
- With assistance, suggests and implements editing and revision to clarify and refine own writing.
- Presents and discusses own writing with other students and responds helpfully to other students’ compositions.
- Independently reviews work for spelling, mechanics, and presentation.
- Produces a variety of written works (e.g., literature responses, reports, "published" books, semantic maps) in a variety of formats, including multimedia forms.
Reading Fact Sheets

Where American Children Stand in Reading, Nationally and Internationally

- The National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) shows little improvement in reading for students in grade 4 and grade 8 since 1992, and a slight downturn for students in grade 12. Improvements in reading have been relatively flat since the early 1970s. In 1996, 38 percent of America’s fourth-graders could not perform at the basic level of reading on the National Assessment of Educational Progress. By contrast, NAEP scores across the grade levels have improved in mathematics and science, subjects that have been the focus of national and community attention (NAEP, 1998, U.S. Department of Education).

- International assessments provide more positive results. American children and youth were found to be better readers than students in many other industrial nations. The literacy score of American 9-year-olds ranked second among 18 participating nations, while American 14-year-olds ranked sixth (International Association for the Evaluation of Education Achievement, 1992).

- Proficient readers remain a minority. Twenty-five percent of fourth-graders, 28 percent of eighth-graders, and 34 percent of twelfth-graders attained at least the "proficient" level in reading. Across the three grades, 5 percent or less reached the "advanced" level of reading achievement (NAEP, 1996, U.S. Department of Education).

- Problems are particularly severe for disadvantaged students. Fifty percent of fourth-grade students whose parents graduated from college have "advanced" or "proficient" reading achievements, whereas only 10 percent of fourth-grade students whose parents did not finish high school read at these levels (NAEP, 1996, U.S. Department of Education).

- Many low-income and minority students lose some literacy and academic abilities during the summer months. Some students lose as much as three to four months of academic progress, while children in high-income areas gain at least a month of progress during the summer (Karweit, Ricciuti, and Thompson, 1994).
• Across the nation from 1992 to 1994, significant declines in average reading proficiency were observed for fourth-grade Hispanic students (NAEP, 1996, U.S. Department of Education).

• More than one child in six has problems learning to read during the first three years of school (NAEP, 1996, U.S. Department of Education).

• Children who do not learn to read comprise over 50 percent of the special education population, and 35 percent of these learning disabled children drop out of school (National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, 1996).
Achieving Success in Reading

- Between 60 percent and 70 percent of parents and teachers agree that reading is the most important subject for students to learn (American Federation of Teachers, 1994). Reading is the gateway to all other knowledge. Students who do not learn efficient reading skills are blocked from every other subject in their schooling (The National Center to Improve the Tools of Educators, 1996).

- Reading, unlike speaking, is a learned behavior that must be taught and repeatedly reinforced (The National Center to Improve the Tools of Educators, 1996).

- It is essential that children find time to read aloud every day. This creates appreciation of the written word, helping students to become better readers (The National Center to Improve the Tools of Educators, 1996).

- Communities ranking well in achievement tests have several key variables such as an abundance of books in public libraries, easy access to books in the community at large (libraries, bookstores), policy of investing in school library, policy of having large classroom libraries, large number of textbooks per student, frequency of book borrowing per students, frequency of silent reading by students, and time spent by teachers reading aloud (Elley, 1992).

- Of fourth-grade students scoring in the 90th percentile in reading ability and literacy practices, 60 percent read for fun daily or almost daily, 66 percent discussed studies at home daily or almost daily, and 63 percent read more than 10 pages each day for school or homework. Nine-year-olds who read more pages per day both in and out of the classroom perform significantly better in NAEP assessments (NAEP, 1996, U.S. Department of Education).

- Learning to read reflectively helps learning disabled students to become better readers. When reading with children, pause for discussion about what has been read. Discuss the language, content, and meaning of the text (The National Center to Improve the Tools of Educators, 1996).

- Above all other things, read, read, and reread (The National Center to Improve the Tools of Educators, 1996).

Reaching All Families: Creating Family-Friendly Schools
This publication presents accumulated knowledge and fresh ideas on school outreach strategies to reach out to all families and help get them involved in their children’s education.

Keeping Schools Open as Community Learning Centers: Extending Learning in a Safe, Drug-Free Environment Before and After School
This guidebook is designed to help schools and community-based organizations begin the process of keeping schools open for children and families beyond the traditional school hours to provide access to valuable education resources in a building free of violence and drugs.

Employers, Families and Education
This publication explores the benefits of family-friendly policies for employers and employees focused on educational activities for children.

This report summarizes 30 years of research showing that greater family involvement in children’s learning is crucial to providing a good education and a safe, disciplined learning environment for every student. The report, released as part of the Partnership for Family Involvement in Education, suggests what schools, communities, businesses, government, and families themselves can do to strengthen family involvement in children’s learning.

America Goes Back to School Partners’ Activity Kit
This publication encourages parents, citizens, and all Americans to rally around their local schools and make a commitment to support education improvement throughout the year.

Information About Standards

Local and state activities
Contact your local school district or state department of education to find out how your community and state are developing and setting higher education and occupation standards.

The Goals 2000: Educate America Act
Provides funding to help schools raise standards and improve their accountability. It encourages communities to create their own school improvement plans. For information, call your state education department or the U.S. Department of Education at (202) 401-0039.

The Education Excellence Partnership has published a booklet about standards for parents called Strengthening your Child's Academic Future. To get your copy, call 1-800-558-5450.

The National Urban League has a new video, Putting Standards into Action, to help parents understand what academic standards are and what they can do to help children reach them. For more information, call 212-558-5450.

The Partnership for Family Involvement in Education

“Better Education Is Everybody's Business”
--U.S. Secretary of Education Richard W. Riley

The Partnership’s Mission

- To use family-school-community partnerships to strengthen schools and improve student achievement.
- To increase opportunities for families to be more involved in their children’s learning at school and at home.

Our Partners

Thousands of partners pledge their support for student learning to high standards through this growing grassroots movement. Partners belong to one of four groups: Family-School Partners, Employers for Learning, Community Organizations, or Religious Groups.

Together, partners support efforts to:

- Strengthen family-school partnerships through good communication and mutual responsibility for children’s learning;
- Adopt family- and student-friendly business practices;
- Provide before- and after-school learning activities for children;
- Make effective use of facilities—schools, community buildings, churches—for children and families; and
- Give parents the resources, training, and information they need to help children learn, and teachers and principals the tools they need to engage families.

The benefits of joining include:

- Connecting with other groups to share and learn from one another;
- Working together to strengthen and improve efforts to help children learn;
- Keeping up with the latest information and activities nationwide; and
- Receiving recognition for visible commitments at the local, state, and national levels.

Activities of the Partnership

In addition to the numerous local activities in which Partnership members are involved, many participate in nationwide activities such as the following:

- READ*WRITE*NOW! As part of the America Reads Challenge, this activity focuses on improving reading skills and abilities of children from birth through the sixth grade. Participating children read and write for thirty minutes every day, and teenagers and adults serve as reading partners to young children once a week.

- America Goes Back to School. During the months of August through October, Americans across the country go back to school to share their talents and experiences. Each makes a year-long commitment, starting in the fall, to help improve education and to help students learn.

- Think College Early. This initiative helps increase awareness and support for middle and high school students to take the courses needed to enter college and to be prepared financially.

- Priority on After-School Extended Learning. This initiative places new emphasis on the importance of providing before- and after-school activities that extend learning for children in a safe, drug-free environment.

Partner Registration

To register and receive your Partnership Promise Certificate, provide the information requested and submit this form to the Partnership for Family Involvement in Education, 400 Maryland Avenue, SW, Washington, DC 20202-8173, fax (202) 205-9133. You can also complete and submit this form online at http://www.pfie.ed.gov.

The registration must include a contact person and phone number in order to be processed. The information you provide may be made available on the Web by the U.S. Department of Education. In any event, the information is subject to the Freedom of Information Act, and will be made available to requestors upon request.

We would like to become a member of the Partnership for Family Involvement in Education. We commit to family-friendly practices and will work with others to form partnerships that support children’s learning.
